Shuble had made a trip (1851) to Alexandria, Iowa which is near Keokuk for supplies of some sort; on the way back home he was stricken with "a congestion" which we know today as pneumonia. He died before he reached home.

A fellow by the name of John Payton dug a grave in a thicket where the present Oakland cemetery is no located. It is reported that his was the first in the cemetery although it has been lost without trace today.

Notes for RHODA ANN WORTHINGTON:

About five years after Shubles death, Rhoda married pioneer John Gordan. The old Fuller farm was sold & the monies put into a trust for the children, The money was administered by Jacob Shonts who was named guardian of the six girls & one boy (John Worthington).

An interesting side note was that Jacob Shonts was an uncle to Theo P. Shonts, later head of the Interborough Transit System of New York & Brooklyn and who later tried & failed to dig the Panama Canal.

As youngsters, Theo. & John Worthington were good friends.
